COPYRIGHT AND RESTRICTIONS

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted materials. The various state privacy acts govern the use of materials that document private individuals, groups, and corporations.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a reproduction if the document does not infringe the privacy rights of an individual, group, or corporation. These specified conditions of authorized use include:

- non-commercial and non-profit study, scholarship, or research, or teaching
- criticism, commentary, or news reporting
- as a NPS preservation or security copy
- as a research copy for deposit in another institution

If a user later uses a copy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," the user may be personally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement. This institution's permission to obtain a photographic, xerographic, digital, or other copy of a document doesn't indicate permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, sell, distribute, or prepare derivative works from this document without first obtaining permission from the copyright holder and from any private individual, group, or corporation shown or otherwise recorded.

Permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, prepare derivative works from, sell, or otherwise distribute the item must be obtained by the user separately in writing from the holder of the original copyright (or if the creator is dead from his/her heirs) as well as from any individual(s), groups, or corporations whose name, image, recorded words, or private information (e.g., employment information) may be reproduced in the source material. The holder of the original copyright isn't necessarily the National Park Service. The National Park Service is not legally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement when materials are wrongfully used after being provided to researchers for "fair use."

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copying order if fulfillment of the order is judged in violation of copyright or federal or state privacy or publicity law.

HISTORY

The Harpers Ferry National Historical Park lies at the confluence of the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers, where the states of West Virginia, Virginia, and Maryland converge. The Lower Town is at the point of the peninsula formed by the two rivers. The Park was established primarily to preserve historic resources and to commemorate the historic events that occurred at Harpers Ferry for the benefit and enjoyment of all people.

Harpers Ferry National Monument was authorized by Congress in 1944 under Public Law 78-386. The name was later changed to national historical park in 1963. Today, the Park contains 3,645 acres, with most of it in West Virginia, but with other sections in Maryland and Virginia.

During its earliest period the town of Harpers Ferry was an important manufacturing and commercial town, using the two rivers for water power and transportation. The Federal Armory was established on June 15, 1796, by President George Washington. When production began in 1801, it became the nation's second Federal Armory.

By the 1850s, Harpers Ferry had become militarily significant because of the U.S. Armory and Arsenal and geographically significant due to the Baltimore and Ohio (B&O) Railroad and Chesapeake and Ohio (C&O) Canal.

In 1859 Harpers Ferry was the scene of the electrifying John Brown Raid, a significant event in the days leading up to the Civil War. Strategically important, due to its location at the gateway into the Shenandoah Valley, Harpers Ferry changed hands officially eight times during the war. The town's capture by Confederate troops under the command of Major General Thomas J. "Stonewall" Jackson in 1862, together with 12,693 surrendered Union soldiers, was a dramatic prelude to the great battle at Antietam Creek that ended the South's first invasion of the North. It was the largest number of Union soldiers surrendered during the Civil War.

The Union army quickly reoccupied Harpers Ferry and in 1862-64 converted the position into a fortress with strong field fortifications overlooking the town on the summits of Bolivar Heights, Loudoun Heights, and Maryland Heights. In July 1864, the Union Army repelled an attack here by Lieutenant General Jubal Early's Confederate army. This four-day operation and the later battle at Monocacy Junction delayed the Confederate army enough to allow the Union to reinforce Washington and stave off its capture.

From August 1864 to December 1864, Harpers Ferry served as the main base of operations and chief supply depot for Major General Philip S. Sheridan's Union army during the final campaign in which Sheridan successfully destroyed Early's army as a fighting force and conquered the Shenandoah Valley in Virginia for the Union.

By the end of the Civil War, Harpers Ferry was a ghost of the former town. Mills on Virginius Island and the U. S. arms manufacturing plants on Lower Hall’s Island and in the Musket Factory yard along the Potomac were largely destroyed. The United States Government decided not to rebuild the Armory at Harpers Ferry and to dispose of its lands and ruined buildings. In part because of these decisions, the town of Harpers Ferry never fully recovered its industrial importance.

The most recent events of national significance to take place at Harpers Ferry occurred during the period 1865-1955 and relate to black history and education and the Niagara Movement. These were related to the founding and operation of Storer College. Established through the efforts of the U.S. Freedman's Bureau, the Freewill Baptist denomination, and a New England philanthropist named John Storer, the school was one of the first to provide education for freed slaves. It was chartered as an integrated institution, a symbol of freedom through education, and a symbol of what John Brown had hoped to achieve. Among the first trustees was Frederick Douglass. It was the location of the second meeting of the Niagara Movement in 1906, an event of great importance in the later establishment of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

These records include the interpretive operations, park archeology projects, records of the Museum Management Program, land records, administration, facility management, compliance, and the park’s architect’s files. These will add to the body of scholarship on Harpers Ferry, for use by other archeologists, historians, teachers, students, and others. In addition, they contribute to a clearer understanding of the area’s history, and enhance the experience of those who visit the park. Additionally, they facilitate the proper management of the resources in order to minimize any impairment and promote their preservation for future generations.

NUMBER VOLUME 195 LF

DESCRIPTION Correspondence, reports, notes, drafts, bound volumes, blueprints, deeds, transcripts, drawings, and photographs relating to all aspects of the administration of Harpers Ferry National Historical Park. Topics covered include curatorial issues, land acquisition, and preservation initiatives.

ORGANIZATION Organized into seven series: Series I: Records of the Architect's Office; Series II: Records of the Land Manager's Office; Series III: Interpretation and Cultural Resources Records; Series IV: Natural Resources Records; Series V: Records of the Archeology Program; Series VI: Compliance Records; Series VII: Cultural Landscape Reports; Series VIII: Records of the Administrative Program; Series IX: Records of the Facilities Management Program; Series X: Youth Conservation Corps.

PROVENANCE Series I was begun and primarily compiled by the first park Historical Architect A.W. "Archie" Franzen. Franzen began work in August 1956 following a short stint at Saratoga National Historical Park. Governed by the Eastern Office of Design and Construction (EODC), his first task was to submit building reports on the individual structures with new park historian Herbert Kissling. These reports provided necessary direction and focus for demolition and rehabilitation decisions for the overall look of the park, lower town especially.

Following the introduction of a new superintendent Snell, a larger historic team was hired. This team compiled further historical building reports, providing background on ownership, structural development, and use of buildings which complemented staff surveys of treatment options. However, Franzen still had a voice in the building decisions gleaned from these reports about restoration and rehabilitation.

Of note, Franzen designed the mock fort used during the centennial celebration of John Brown's raid in 1959. The fort was established on the Storer College tennis courts and was built by local workers. He also assisted the acquisition of Storer College for the park with Research Historian Alfred Mongin, pointing out the large store of records there and their archival possibilities. Although other purposes were in mind for the property, Franzen had a hand in proving its usefulness and history. He produced an exhibit of the architectural reconstruction of the Harper House (building 3) for the Garden Club in 1960 which helped to raise money for furnishings.

During his more than 30 year career at Harpers Ferry, Franzen obtained a full structural evaluation of park buildings, the Episcopal Church ruins, stone steps, structures on Virginius Island, and Maryland Heights walls. He helped steer the park in a new direction of considering park resources for more than just their aesthetic qualities. Franzen also helped strengthen the integrity of the architect's office recommendations, gaining greater authority in promoting structural care in the park. He assisted in the restoration and interpretation of historical structures throughout the park. He assisted in archeological excursions to better interpret sites. Franzen helped establish the necessity of a permanent architect for the park due to the large number of restorations and building concerns in the park.

Following several brief staff interludes after Franzen's departure, Peter F. Dessauer came to the park in 1992 as the new Historical Architect. He has continued in much the same role, with some added interpretive and volunteer duties utilizing the records compiled during Franzen's time.

Series II was begun by the Natural Resource Specialist and Lands Program Manager Bill Hebb. The need for better archeological programs and resource management created the Archeological and Historic Preservation Act of 1974 and helped bring Hebb to the park to manage its resources and lands in the late 1970s. Originally in charge of the horses for a short-lived mounted ranger program, Hebb moved into natural resources and later gained land management, his preferred division.

Over his 30 year career, Hebb kept detailed, organized records of his many activities. Reporting directly to Superintendent Don Campbell, vital for the success of the land management program, Hebb performed many functions for the park. As an unofficial version of an assistant superintendent, he performed tasks on rehabilitation, interpretation, and was very involved with many of the land acquisitions during this time including the set-up of the Customs building and Murphy Farm.

Following Hebb's retirement in 2008, the new Land Management Specialist, Andrew S. Lee, was brought on after a brief detail in the park. Land Management was split from Natural Resources at this time and Lee continued solely under lands where he monitored and added records related to acquisitions, land issues, easements, and encroachments among other duties.

SERIES III: INTERPRETATION AND CULTURAL RESOURCE MANAGEMENT RECORDS, 1962 -2001

This collection documents the interpretation of the park's historic structures and landscape, as well as the management of the museum collections. This series should be created by combining the Dennis Frye Papers, Collection Management Documents, Hilda Staubs Exhibit Files and Archives, Miscellaneous Curatorial Files, Collection Management Photograph Binders, Scripts, and Living History Cards. The Museum Curator and the Park Historian fall under the supervision of the Chief of Interpretation and Cultural Resources Management, and often several departments within this division collaborate on exhibit planning and public relations
