Bibliography Series No. 12

September 1969

INTRODUCTION

The threat of extinction facing some species of North American wildlife is increasingly being placed before the public by the mass communications media. Because of the need and demand for information on these species the U.S. Department of the Interior Library has undertaken the compilation of bibliographies on some of those species which are most seriously endangered.

The purpose of this bibliography, the second of the series, is to make more readily available literature which has been published on the American ivory-billed woodpecker through the year 1968. The first bibliography was on the California condor.

Periodical articles, separates, and some parts of books have been included. Field guides, newspaper articles, and general bird books containing short descriptions of the ivory-billed woodpecker have not been included. Works dealing only with taxonomy have also been excluded. Individual citations for certain publications which repeatedly but briefly mention the ivory-billed woodpecker have been omitted. The reader may wish to refer to the following:

1. The Auk. 1884- . (1876-1883, published as Bulletin of the Nuttall Ornithological Club.) This periodical regularly publishes the reports of the American Ornithologists' Union Committee on Bird Protection. See the table of contents in individual volumes for reports of the committee.
2. Louisiana Conservation Commission Report. 1910-1916.
Continued as Louisiana Department of Conservation Report. 1916-1944.
Continued as Louisiana Department of Wild Life and Fisheries Biennial Report. 1944/45-1950/51.
Continued as Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission Report. 1951/52- .

The arrangement of the items in this bibliography is alphabetical by author. For items in which material on the ivory-billed woodpecker appears in a limited part of the text, references to the appropriate pages are given after the citation. Illustrated material is indicated by an asterisk (*). Editions cited are those in the library, when possible. Separates with call numbers fol-

Following the citation are in the Department of the Interior Library collection. For periodicals see the periodical shelves or consult a librarian.
