

Construction of Traditional Canoe Photo Series (SHPO PWRO 488 and SHPO PWRO 490)

(Bolded pictures are those that are attached to the reference)

SHPO_PWRO_490:

- A man sitting on the connecting platform between the outrigger and the canoe on the platform above the outrigger, tying rope connecting the outrigger to the canoe; the outrigger is on the right side (Canoe1)
- The view of the canoe from outside the shed with four men sitting on the platform between the canoe and outrigger, one man standing in front of the platform, and three people outside the shed; the outrigger is on the right side (Canoe2)
- Four men sitting on the connecting platform between the outrigger and canoe with one man standing beside it; the outrigger is on the right side (Canoe3)
- Four men sitting on the connecting platform between the outrigger and the canoe with one man standing beside it; the outrigger is on the right side (Canoe4)
- The outrigger and part of the outrigger platform from the left (canoe) side (Canoe5)
- The sail of the outrigger tied to a horizontal post (Canoe6)
- The (non-outrigger) side of the canoe painted black at the bottom with two red stripes in the center and a white stripe at the top; in the white stripe is a name 'Simion Hokulea', likely the name of the vessel (Canoe7)
- The outrigger with the connecting platform between the outrigger and canoe to the right; shows some detail of the rope tying used to secure the outrigger (Canoe8)
- The view of the canoe from outside the shed, now empty; the outrigger is on the right side (Canoe9)
- Three men standing at the center right of the photo on the rocky coast of a waterway; the man in the center looks white, while the men on either side have darker skin and look native (Tarang1)
- A white man standing in front of a classroom setting; the tables are arranged in a rectangle/square, with most of the men crowded around and sitting on three sides and facing the fourth, where the man standing is behind; approximately thirteen men sitting, all seem to have darker skin than the man standing (Tarang2)
