Shelton's Novel Bread Raiser.

To raise dough previous to baking requires a mild, uniform heat that can seldom be attained in an ordinary oven without great care and risk. In view of this circumstance, the invention of Mr. Walter M. Shelton, of Atlee's, Va., will meet a long felt want hitherto unsupplied in a manner so simple and satisfactory. The engraving gives a view with side partially broken away, revealing the interior arrangement. It will be seen that the dough pans may rest on the racks provided inside. A lamp placed outside sends its heat into a pipe with flaring entrance, and this pipe is curved through an aperture and terminates in a downcurved extremity, so that the heat current is deflected downward and evenly diffused throughout the chamber. The door is provided with a vertical narrow slot aperture, which displays a thermometer tube that is mounted against the inner face of the door by a keeper plate. The observer can see the indicated temperature from the outside. A small aperture is provided near the lower portion and curved with a pivoted plate, by which the temperature may be regulated when desirable. This device has prime merit and should be introduced into every household.

HISTORY

The history of Shelton House and the Shelton Family of Rural Plains, Virginia, have been intertwined for nearly three hundred years. Dendrochronology evidence and land deeds have indicated that the Shelton House was built around ca.1725, possibly for John Shelton I, in the locale now known as Mechanicsville in Hanover County.(1) His male descendants' families lived at the House until the death of William Robert Shelton, Jr. in 2006. The house passed down from generation to generation with William Robert Shelton, Sr.'s purchase of the House at auction in 1903 ensuring the property remained in the family.

The family's long tenancy was one factor in contributing to the House's fame in the twentieth century. Its age was another point of interest, particularly as the House was believed to have been built around 1670, and its vernacular style and original brickwork were rare. Patrick Henry, American patriot and Virginia statesman, married into the family in 1754, and family members believed his union to Sarah Shelton occurred in the front parlor.

The family's and House's role in the Battle of Totopotomoy Creek, May 29-31, 1864 is significant in state and national history. Major General Winfield Scott Hancock, U.S. Army, and his men took over the house to use as temporary headquarters. With master of the house Colonel Edwin Shelton away, Mrs. Sarah Sheldon and her family stayed in the basement while the Confederates bombarded the House. The teenager Walter M. Shelton later remember the toll the battle took on the plantation:

"Rural Plains was a beautiful estate when the federals arrived. The next morning when I looked out I scarcely recognized the place. Some of the out-houses and the fences had been torn down. The out houses, fences and all the farm implements were used to build fortifications. Also two peach orchards, two apple orchards were cut down + used for same purpose. A few apple trees were left standing near the road."(2)

Before the war, Colonel Edwin Shelton used slaves to grow wheat, Indian corn, tobacco, and other crops at Rural Plains which grew in size from roughly 400 acres to nearly 900 acres by 1857. The family employed daily workers instead of slaves after the Civil War to farm the land.(3) Edwin Shelton, who was a lieutenant colonel in the Virginia militia, also ran a school for girls from 1838 to before 1850 at the House.(4)

After the Colonel's death in 1874, his property holdings were divided between his wife and his children. Walter M., the Colonel's son, inherited the 126 1/4 acre parcel with Shelton House which comprises today's "Rural Plains." He pursued patents for his inventions including a bread-raising machine in addition to tending the property. He is presumed to have encountered financial difficulties which led to the 1903 auction.

His son, William Robert Shelton Sr., after buying the property, grew the traditional crops of corn and watermelon but also started the "Rural Plains Nursery" in 1927. In the 1930s and 1940s, the nursery sold a variety of shrubs and flowers but specialized in boxwoods and pine. Shelton was deeply involved in Virginia agricultural societies and also served on the Board of Supervisors. Maud Greenlee, his wife, who had studied at Presbyterian College, Charlotte, North Carolina, and Osgood's School of Art in New York City before her marriage, promoted the nursery by writing and speaking to garden clubs. She and ardently her husband were active in promoting Studley, the birthplace of Patrick Henry, as a National Monument. William Sr.'s children, William Robert, Jr., and Mary Winn Shelton ran the Rural Plains Nursery after his death in 1958.⁽⁵⁾ They had grown up with the family's and the House's history. Mary Winn studied genealogy, was a member of several colonial descendant societies, and was noted for her knowledge of Hanover County history. William, Jr., and Hollie, his wife, lived in and kept up the House during their lives and continued the family tradition of greeting visitors who wished to tour the House. Hollie told one newspaper her experience of living in an historic house: "I think of it as all you have to do ... You have to dust and polish. You have to cut trees down. Different little things go wrong all the time. Still, it's nice to live with so much history."⁽⁶⁾ William, Jr., and Hollie Shelton made public their wishes to preserve the property as an historic house after their deaths. They sold the house and land to the Totopotomoy Battlefield at Rural Plains Foundation in 2000, keeping a life interest. After Hollie's death in 2004 and William Jr.'s death in 2006, the foundation turned over the property to the National Park Service.

CATALOG NUMBER RICH 7850

VOLUME 14.5 LF

DESCRIPTION Newspaper clippings, business and legal records, photographs and drawings, family bibles, and genealogical documents comprise this set of Shelton Family Papers. Most of the business records relate to the twentieth-century Rural Plains Nursery, but two account books and assorted receipts belonged to Colonel Edwin Shelton who ran the Rural Plains plantation until his death in 1874. The twentieth-century articles relating to Shelton House and the Shelton Family make up the bulk of the papers and include photodocumentation of the exterior and interiors and biographical information on the Sheltons. Mary Wynn Shelton donated much of the nineteenth-century material in the House to the Library of Virginia (see Associated Materials below). Photostats of the records directly related to the Shelton family's role in the Civil War from the Library of Virginia are included in these papers.

Limited documentation exists in these papers regarding slavery at Rural Plains. One receipt lists the names of the enslaved men and women Sarah Shelton inherited from her father. The farm laborers listed in the 1858-1873 Edwin Shelton ledger may have been enslaved.

ORGANIZATION Organized into fifteen series, most based on family generational groups: I. Family Bibles; II. John Shelton II (ca. 1713-ca. 1769) and Eleanor Parks Shelton; III. John Shelton III (ca. 1750-31 October 1789) and Anne Southall Shelton (Foster) (1760-1830); IV. Edwin Shelton (1798-1874) and Sarah Oliver Shelton (1810-1887); V. Walter Mitchell Shelton (1849-1932) and Bertie Winn Shelton (1856-1903); VI. William Robert Shelton, Sr. (1877-1958) and Maud Greenlee Shelton (1884-1949); VII. Mary Winn Shelton (1916-1967); VIII. Collected Materials.
Arrangement: Chronologically within series.

PROVENANCE Representatives from the Richmond National Battlefield Park collected these papers from Shelton House along with selected furnishings and books and purchased them from the estate of William Robert Shelton, Jr., in 2006.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

SERIES I: FAMILY BIBLES, ca. 1800-2000

These three bibles owned by generations of Shelton family members hold handwritten lists of births, deaths, and marriages and other genealogical materials.

SERIES II: JOHN SHELTON II (ca. 1713-ca. 1769) AND ELEANOR PARKS SHELTON, 1764

This series holds nineteenth-century copies of a October 1764 deed of land in Hanover County to Paul Tilman.

SERIES III: JOHN SHELTON III (ca. 1750-1789) AND ANNE SOUTHALL SHELTON (FOSTER), 1794-1819

A small amount of legal records comprise this series. The deposition taken in the case of Foster and His Wife and Others versus Crenshaw's Executors gives details about the sale of Shelton enslaved persons.

SERIES IV: EDWIN SHELTON (1798-1874) AND SARAH OLIVER SHELTON (1810-1887), 1794-1893

Documents relate to Edwin, Sarah Oliver, their children, and Sarah's family. The business ledgers and receipts are connected to Shelton's careers as a plantation owner and school master. Papers relating to Shelton's service as executor for his father-in-law's and brothers-in-law's estates are included. The bills for Sarah Olive Shelton's early education are here as well as an obituary for young John Southall Shelton.

SERIES V: WALTER MITCHELL SHELTON (1849-1932) AND BERTIE WINN SHELTON (1856-1903), ca. 1865-1926

This series includes items related to Walter, his wife Bertie Winn, and their children. Documents related to the Winn family are also present. Two short memoirs give Walter's vivid memories of the Battle of Totopotomoy Creek and its aftermath.

SERIES VI: WILLIAM ROBERT SHELTON, SR. (1877-1958) AND MAUD GREENLEE SHELTON (1884-1949), 1899-1958

Ephemera including wedding invitations and clippings, birth announcements, and campaign literature relate to Robert, Sr., and Maud Greenlee, his wife. Correspondence and collected brochures indicate the great interest Maud and Robert, Sr., took in commemorating Patrick Henry.

SERIES VII: MARY WINN SHELTON (1916-1967), 1943-1965

Mary Winn Shelton's invitation to Queen Elizabeth II to visit Shelton House and its response is included. Her family history studies are in the Genealogy series below.

SERIES VIII: WILLIAM ROBERT SHELTON, JR. (1920-2006) AND HOLLIE BAILEY SHELTON (ca. 1915-2004), 1938-2004

A small amount of ephemera including Hollie's obituary represents this series.

SERIES IX. SHELTON HOUSE, 1929-1958

The guestbooks with the names and addresses of visitors demonstrate the interest which the House held for local residents, out-of-state visitors, and distant members of the Shelton Family. Garden and house tour brochures show that generations of the family opened the House frequently.

SERIES X. RURAL PLAINS NURSERY, 1927-1976

No business accounts are present, but business cards, order forms, and plant catalogs indicate what the Nursery grew and sold.

SERIES XI: GENEALOGY, 1859-ca. 1980

The Shelton Family of Rural Plains, particularly Bertie Winn, Maud Greenlee, and Mary Winn, were keenly interested in their family's history and collected publications and correspondence about their branch and the Shelton Family in general. Mary Winn copied documents and compiled notes (her family tree is in her series above.)

SERIES XII. IMAGES, ca. 1861-1991

Carte-de-visites represent a few of the nineteenth-century Sheltons. Snapshots mostly comprise the twentieth-century exteriors and interiors of Shelton House. (For additional professional photographs, see Box 2, Fldrs. 26 and 28 and newspaper clippings.) Two watercolors represent the House in the 1920s. Maud Greenlee attended art school, but it is not known whether she painted these images.

SERIES XIII: NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS, 1826-1993

The main themes in the collected clippings and magazines are Civil War commemorations, Hanover County history, and articles focusing on Shelton House and its residents. The articles about the Democratic Party relate to the family's, particularly William, Sr.'s, long-time support. Maude Greenlee wrote articles about gardening for the local papers, and William Sr.'s success as a corn grower is documented.

SERIES XIV: COLLECTED MATERIALS, 1812-1957

This series holds the printed ephemera held by the family that could not be associated with an individual. The Confederate currency was preserved long after it was void. The patriotic posters relate to the family's support of the Red Cross.
